	B1.	Summarize the following passage: If you're not happy, how can you make others happy? It's like having an empty cup - you can't pour from it. Making yourself happy is important. Doing things you love, spending time with loved ones, and taking care of yourself are ways to fill your cup. When you're happy, it's easier to spread joy to others. Your happiness shines through your actions and words, making others happy too. So, remember to take time for yourself, do what brings you joy, and watch how your happiness spreads to those around you. Happiness starts from within!	L2	CO3	05
	B2.	Illustrate a situational conversation based on the situation below: Situation: Meeting the head of the IT company after your official interview. As he is interested in your project proposal, you discuss more about the possibilities of working on your major project that you introduced during your interview to the panel members.	L3	CO3	05
12.	a.	Read the following passage and answer the questions in a sentence: Failure. It's a word that often invokes fear, anxiety, and a sense of inadequacy. Yet, hidden within the shadows of failure lies a profound opportunity for growth, resilience, and ultimately, success. The fear of failure can be paralyzing, preventing us from taking risks and reaching our true potential. However, what if we were to permit ourselves to fail? What if we reframed failure not as an end, but as a stepping stone on the path to success?	L3	CO3	2X5

		In the pursuit of our goals and dreams, we are often bombarded with messages that emphasize perfection and success. We see curated versions of people's lives on social media, highlighting only their triumphs, not the struggles and failures they endured along the way. This constant comparison can lead us to believe that failure is something to be ashamed of, something to avoid at all costs. However, the reality is that failure is an integral part of the journey towards success. When we permit ourselves to fail, we release ourselves from the suffocating pressure of perfection. We allow ourselves to take risks, try new things, and step outside of our comfort zones. It is through failure that we learn some of life's most valuable lessons. Thomas Edison famously said, "I have not failed. I've just found 10,000 ways that won't work." Each failure was not a defeat but a lesson, bringing him one step closer to his ultimate success in inventing the light bulb. Failure teaches us resilience. It is easy to be confident and determined when everything is going according to plan. However, it is in the face of failure that our true strength is revealed. This resilience is a powerful tool that can propel us forward, even in the face of adversity. Moreover, failure breeds innovation and creativity. Some of the greatest discoveries and inventions in history arose from failures. When we embrace failure as a natural part of the creative process, we open ourselves up to new possibilities and breakthroughs. In conclusion, permitting yourself to fail is not about embracing mediocrity or settling for less. It is about acknowledging that failure is an essential part of the path to success. It is about taking risks, learning from mistakes, and growing stronger with each setback. So, the next time you face a challenge, remember to permit yourself to fail. After all, it might just be the key to your greatest success. 1. What emotions does the word "failure" often invoke? 2. What can the fear of failure prevent us from doing? 3. What does failure teach us? 4. What can failure breed, according to the passage? 5. What is permitting yourself to fail ultimately about?
