9.	a.	Read the below given passage and state findings you would highlight through skimming and scanning. India, often celebrated for its rich cultural heritage and diverse traditions, has long held a reputation for placing a premium on education. Parents in the country frequently emphasize the importance of academic success, hoping to secure a brighter future for their children. However, this relentless pursuit of academic achievement has given rise to a harrowing phenomenon—the intense pressure on Indian children to perform in studies. This culture of cutthroat competition, the relentless race for marks and	L2	CO1	10

		numbers, and the resulting mental health issues, including anxiety attacks, low self-confidence, depression, and, tragically, suicide, is a growing concern. The Rat Race for Academic Excellence The relentless pursuit of academic excellence in India has often been likened to a high-stakes game, where the coveted prize is nothing less than a prosperous and successful life. This intense pursuit starts early, with children as young as five or six years old being thrust into a fiercely competitive educational environment. As these young minds embark on their academic journeys, they are immediately faced with the expectation of securing high grades, a prelude to a life of promise and accomplishment. From the moment they enter the hallowed halls of school, Indian students find themselves in the thick of this relentless race for academic success. The pressure steadily mounts as they progress through various stages of their education, intensifying with each passing year. The race to secure top marks and be the best in their class becomes a constant presence in their lives, permeating every facet of their existence. A significant factor contributing to this relentless pressure is the prevailing emphasis on rote memorization and standardized examinations. Students are often expected to memorize vast amounts of information and regurgitate it on exams, leaving them with little room for genuine understanding or critical thinking. The emphasis on examinations, while necessary to assess knowledge and skills, has the unintended consequence of reducing education to a numbers game, where the only measure of success is the score on a piece of paper. In this environment, students face a formidable challenge. They must not only excel academically but also navigate a system that can be highly competitive and sometimes unforgiving. The fear of falling short, of not being able to keep up with the relentless pace or not achieving the high grades expected by parents, teachers, and society, can create an immense burden. This fear, in turn, drives many students to push themselves to their limits, often at the expense of their mental and emotional well-being. In this high-stress environment, the pursuit of holistic learning and creativity can often be sacrificed. The narrow focus on exam-oriented education can stifle students' innate curiosity and suppress their ability to explore, innovate, and discover. The pressure to conform to a predetermined path can leave students feeling trapped, unable to pursue their passions or talents beyond the prescribed curriculum.

Mr. Jeff questioned Ms. Rani (country head for India) How is it that Indians are okay with arranged marriage. How can even love be dealt with like business. Where is the heart lost in all this? I pity the state of the youth forced into these relationships. Rani though perplexed at this sudden burst of judgement, replied, Marriage in India is not just between the man and the woman but the families coming together. Yes, some marriages do fail, many marriages do make lasting bonds of love and companionship. So love according to me is very subjective and each marriage is unique, whichever be the country. Jeff replied, Oh! When you speak it seems so ideal, anyhow yes that is true each relationship is unique and the reason for love is as crazy as love itself.	L3	CO4	10

	b.	Read the below given story and explain in detail empathy in need for action beyond intention and why is it integral to imbibe listening skills in the current business world. A farmer had some puppies he needed to sell. He painted a sign advertising the 4 pups and set about nailing it to a post on the edge of his yard. As he was driving the last nail into the post, he felt a tug on his overalls. He looked down into the eyes of a little boy. "Mister," he said, "I want to buy one of your puppies."	L3	CO3	10

		"Well," said the farmer, as he rubbed the sweat off the back of his neck, "These puppies come from fine parents and cost a good deal of money." The boy dropped his head for a moment. Then reaching deep into his pocket, he pulled out a handful of change and held it up to the farmer. "I've got thirty-nine cents.Is that enough to take a look?" "Sure," said the farmer. And with that he let out a whistle. "Here, Dolly!" he called. Out from the doghouse and down the ramp ran Dolly followed by four little balls of fur. The little boy pressed his face against the chain link fence. His eyes danced with delight. As the dogs made their way to the fence, the little boy noticed something else stirring inside the doghouse. Slowly another little ball appeared, this one noticeably smaller. Down the ramp it slid. Then in a somewhat awkward manner, the little pup began hobbling toward the others, doing its best to catch up... "I want that one," the little boy said, pointing to the runt. The farmer knelt down at the boy's side and said, "Son, you don't want that puppy. He will never be able to run and play with you like these other dogs would." With that the little boy stepped back from the fence, reached down, and began rolling up one leg of his trousers. In doing so he revealed a steel brace running down both sides of his leg attaching itself to a specially made shoe. Looking back up at the farmer, he said, "You see sir, I don't run too well myself, and he will need someone who understands." With tears in his eyes, the farmer reached down and picked up the little pup.
